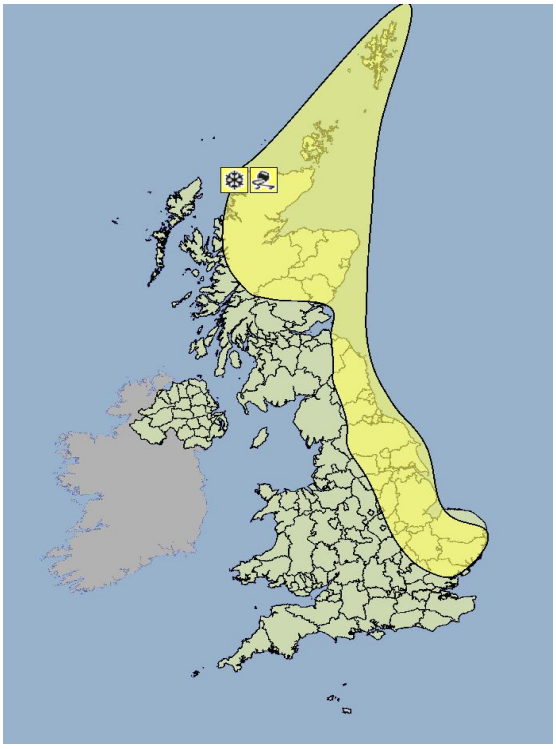
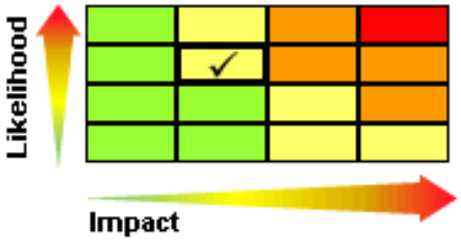
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Showers in England will largely be confined to the far eastern regions at first, but will penetrate further inland by the end of the afternoon. These showers will then increasingly turn back to sleet and rain to lower levels overnight, but snow will persist on the higher ground of the North York Moors and eastern Pennines through Friday morning. Showers will ease in Scotland during the evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 11:00 on Thu, 30th Nov 2017 until 10:00 on Fri, 01st Dec 2017

Occasional heavy wintry showers are expected, mainly during Thursday afternoon and evening. 2-5 cm of snow may accumulate on ground above 100 m, primarily over Scotland and northeast England. Meanwhile a centimetre or two is possible to low levels, with any low level accumulations across England being temporary. Journey times may be longer by road, bus and rail.

Icy stretches are also expected to form on some untreated roads, pavements and cycle paths or where showers cause wash off on treated roads, particularly during Thursday evening and Friday morning.
